RODNEY KING DIES

King

Los Angeles Times

Rodney King, whose 1991 beating by Los Angeles police helped spark the 1992 L.A. riots, died Sunday at his home in Rialto, Calif. He was 47.

King became a symbol for police brutality and the troubled relations between the LAPD and minority residents. He eventually was awarded a $3.8 million settlement, but the money and fame brought him little peace. He had repeated run-ins with the law and as of April said he was broke.

"I sometimes feel like I'm caught in a vise. Some people feel like I'm some kind of hero," he told the Times earlier this year. "Others hate me. They say I deserved it. Other people, I can hear them mocking me for when I called for an end to the destruction, like I'm a fool for believing in peace."

King's fiancée called 911 about 5:25 a.m. Los Angeles time and said she had found King at the bottom of his pool, Sgt. Paul Stella said. Officers pulled him from the pool and began CPR until paramedics arrived and took King to Arrowhead Regional Medical Center in Colton, Calif. King was pronounced dead at the hospital at 6:11 a.m., Stella said.

Preliminary information indicated King drowned and there were no immediate signs of foul play, Stella said. An autopsy will be conducted.

During a public appearance for a memoir published earlier this year, King seemed in good spirits and said he was trying to turn a corner in his life. The book's title is "The Riot Within: My Journey From Rebellion to Redemption."

King had long struggled with drugs and alcohol. He called himself a recovering addict but had not stopped drinking, and possessed a doctor's clearance for medical marijuana. King last year appeared on VH1's "Celebrity Rehab," trying to tackle his fight with alcoholism.

King was drunk and unarmed when he was pulled over for speeding by Los Angeles Police Department officers and beaten.

RIOTS REVISITED

Rodney King was thrust into the public spotlight when a camera captured him being brutally beaten by L.A. police in 1991. Four officers involved were acquitted a year later, sparking infamous riots that shut down the city of Los Angeles and created a national controversy. CNN

- » More than 3,000 disaster loan applications were filed.
- » Government assistance awarded totaled $900 million.
- » The bystander video shows King being struck by police batons more than 50 times. More than 20 officers were present at the scene, most from the LAPD.
- » King suffered 11 fractures and other injuries due to the beating.
- » More than 9,800 National Guard troops were dispatched to restore order.
- » The highest troop presence was on the night of May 3, 1992. There were 1,100 Marines, 600 Army soldiers, and 6,500 National Guard troops on patrol.

The incident was captured on video by a civilian bystander, and the recording became an instant international sensation. Four of the officers were tried for excessive force. Their acquittal on April 29, 1992, touched off one of the worst urban riots in U.S. history.

In an interview with the Times this year,

King confided that he was at peace with what happened to him.

"I would change a few things, but not that much," he said. "Yes, I would go through that night, yes I would. I said once that I wouldn't, but that's not true. It changed things. It made the world a better place."

Hey! Pay for your own honeymoon

Jessica Cantarelli

jcantarelli@tribune.com

@redyejessica

Most of us have high school acquaintances-turned-Facebook friends who pop up on our feeds with updates that make us feel sorry for our 16-year-old selves. THOSE were the people we chose to befriend?

The updates range from the TMI "friend" who posts frequent updates about catching her boyfriend in the act of cheating to the folks who write cryptic, passive-aggressive posts in hopes that someone will ask, "What's wrong?"

My problem lies a bit beyond the above examples—it's with certain "friends" who use social media as a platform to panhandle.

These iPanhndlers, if you will, have used Facebook to make personal sales pitches to their friends and followers—as in, just float me some green for no reason.

In my case, one iPanhndler is getting married this year, and like most brides to be, has a wedding registry that is accessible online. The memo she didn't get is: A) It's tacky when the only items you've registered for are green pieces of paper with presidents' faces on them (perhaps she also takes credit and PayPal?); and B) Your wedding registry is for your wedding guests only—not half the population of Facebook. If your non-guests want to give you a gift, they'll find a way to make it happen.

The couple clearly states their registry is to pay for a honeymoon, and they are flat broke (because nobody else is, right?) and this would be one way their friends and loved ones could really help them out. They call it a "non-traditional wedding gift," as if that helps candy-coat the issue.

Now, don't get me wrong—I have compassion. As a bride-to-be myself, I know how expensive weddings can be, with even the simplest items costing an arm and a leg. ($200 for a cake topper? Really?)

Sadly, it doesn't end there. I recently was invited via Facebook to a bake sale to help this couple raise money for their honeymoon. Come buy some brownies and help us go on vacation? I've got an idea: Here's five bucks—buy yourself some manners.

Call me old-fashioned, but your wedding registry is the place to let your guests know which china pattern you have picked out or which blender to buy. Period. If you don't need those things, don't have a wedding registry at all. Your guests will get the hint.

Social media is a place to stay in touch or reconnect with people from your past, and give those people a glimpse into your day-to-day life, if you so wish.

It is not the place to ask the public for money or outrageous favors that you would never have the guts to do in person.

And to end with a personal note (you know who you are), please stop Facebook inviting me an event called "Shave My Back." Can I just give you a blender instead?

YOU CAN TAKE THIS JOB AND...

...SHOVE IT. WORKERS ARE GETTING MORE COMFORTABLE WITH SAYING SAYONARA

By Georgia Garvey | REDEYE

Most of us have quit a job.

But how many have quit a job like Arika Kaosa did—while getting tattooed?

“Pretty much in the middle of the tattoo, I just called [my boss] up and said, ‘You know what? I quit,’” remembers Kaosa, 25, of Lakeview. She was 18 years old at the time and desperately unhappy. She was underpaid and in a job where co-workers in a relationship regularly fought at work, and management didn’t seem to be willing to correct the problems. “I couldn’t take it anymore.”

Low pay? Stressful environment? Bad management? Many are willing to live with those situations during a terrible economy. The Bureau of Labor Statistics, in fact, uses the data on the number of people quitting their jobs to assess the economy. If people are willing to quit, the thinking goes, they must be confident in their ability to get a new job.

And that’s exactly what employers are seeing. Although a recent jobs report showed unemployment inching up—from 8.1 percent to 8.2 percent in May—at least one economic indicator shows things may be looking up.

During the recession, fewer people quit jobs, and turnover mainly was from layoffs and firings. A couple of years ago, that trend reversed, and now the number of people who quit their jobs is up, with 2.1 million people voluntarily shipping off in March, according to the latest data available. The country hasn’t seen numbers like that since November 2008, according to U.S. Labor Department data. Even fictional characters are doing it. Hannah on “Girls,” Peggy on “Mad Men.” As it turns out, quitters sometimes do win.

Jaime Velasquez, interim director of career services at the University of Illinois-Chicago, said the trend is revealing itself in Chicago’s job market as well. Velasquez organizes the major job fairs at UIC and said that the number of employers recruiting at the university is up 20 percent in the past year to year and a half. As those jobs open up, people are more comfortable leaving current positions, he said.

“We are seeing that [movement] right now,” said Velasquez, who explained that many people during the recession, “for lack of a better word, just settled. They couldn’t find the ideal position they were looking for.”

As the job market turns around, confidence rises, and so does the number of people willing to change jobs to get that perfect gig. Kaosa said, for her, the confidence to quit came from being educated and certified in different fields of work.

“For people who don’t have an education, it’s definitely harder,” she said. “Personally, I’m not too worried. If I had to quit a job right now, I probably still would.”

Kaosa said that she does regret how she quit, however, giving no notice and having the conversation with her boss over the phone. Now that she’s been a manager, she said, she would do things differently.

“I wouldn’t do that again,” she said. “I was 18. It’s the maturity level that you gain.”

Julie Diehl, 36, of Skokie, said she doesn’t have any regrets about quitting a job in le-

OPRAH WINFREY

Quitting: The queen of talk taped her final Chicago show in 2011 after 25 years of dominating the daytime airwaves. Winfrey didn’t leave talk altogether, but ditched her popular show to create her OWN TV network.

Post-quit success? She’s still Oprah, so it’s not like she’s going to be poor anytime soon, but OWN hasn’t exactly had gangbusters success.

Signature exit line: “From you whose names I will never know, I learned what love is. You, and this show, have been the great love of my life.”

QUIT SHOW

They're the brave heroes who've done what we've all wanted to do, said what we wanted to say and departed their jobs in glorious fashion. Some of them left behind money, fame and fortune, while some of them just plain left. They're the characters—both real and fictional—who quit their jobs in high-profile fashion. In honor of the greatest quitters of pop culture, RedEye cobbled together a smattering of the more famous quits in recent memory. G.G.

ARI GOLD

Quitting: On “Entourage,” Ari—played by Chicago native Jeremy Piven—quits the agency he works for, booming opera music providing the background tunes to his spectacular exit.

Post-quit success? Of course. Anyone whose character reportedly is based on the brother of Mayor Emanuel has to do well for himself.

Signature exit line: “Take it. Take it all. Take the company, take your shares, take mine. I don’t give a [bleep].”

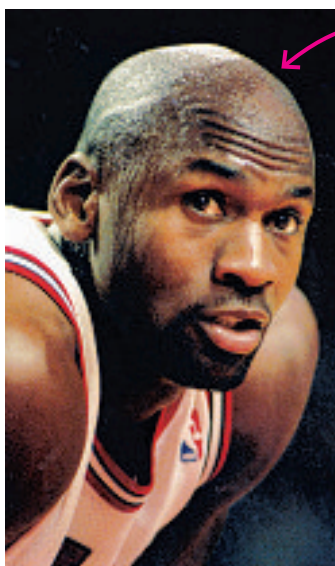

JOANNA

Quitting: In “Office Space,” the ultimate comedy about the drudgery of human existence, Joanna, played by Jennifer Aniston, works at a place that’s clearly TGI Friday’s. She’s forced to wear “flair,” buttons that show off her enthusiasm—but her enthusiasm as a waitress, it turns out, is very limited.

Post-quit success? She lived out the dreams of anyone who’s ever been reprimanded for not being cheerful enough while performing lame tasks. That’s success in our book.

Signature exit line: “I do want to express myself, OK? And I don’t need 37 pieces of flair to do it.” And then she flips off her boss.

MICHAEL JORDAN

Quitting: In 1993, the best basketball player in the world was Michael Jordan, who stunned fans when he announced he was retiring from the NBA after nine years. Jordan left all the glory behind after the death of his father to give professional baseball a shot on a minor-league White Sox team.

Post-quit success? Of course, Jordan’s success in baseball was limited, but when he returned to the Bulls, he brought the championships back to Chicago and all was forgiven.

Signature exit line: “I’ve reached the pinnacle of my career. I’ve achieved a lot in that short amount of time. ... I just feel that I don’t have anything else for myself to prove.”

STEVEN SLATER

Quitting: In 2010, a JetBlue flight attendant—apparently fed up—got on the plane’s intercom to make an announcement. After his goodbye, Slater reportedly grabbed a beer and deployed the inflatable emergency exit, riding it to instant notoriety.

Post-quit success? Debatable. Slater became a cult hero and Internet celebrity, but he also was charged with crimes in connection with the unscheduled departure. He later apologized, saying that he and his mother had been struggling with health problems at the time.

Signature exit line: “To the passenger who just called me a mother[bleeper], [bleep] you. I’ve been in this business 28 years and I’ve had it.”

STRANGER THAN FICTION

There are good reasons for leaving a job, there are bad reasons and then there are just plain weird reasons. A survey of 1,300 senior managers in the U.S. and Canada developed by staffing firm OfficeTeam found bizarre excuses given by quitters.

“One person left because she lost her cell phone too many times at work.”

“A guy said he was making too much money and didn’t feel he was worth it.”

“One person left because she didn’t want to work so hard.”

“An employee said work was getting in the way of having fun.”

“A person quit because informal dress was not allowed.”

“The worker told us he just couldn’t get up in the morning.”

gal marketing roughly seven years ago, even though she had no permanent full-time job to replace the one she was leaving. Diehl said the situation—a bad boss who was driving many employees away—was too crappy to endure. Diehl didn’t flip her boss the bird on the way out, but she did give an honest exit interview that laid out why she was leaving.

“I definitely didn’t want to burn bridges, but at the same time, I wanted to voice my opinion to how dysfunctional [the job] had been,” she said. “By putting it to words, I feel like I told it to the right person. It helped.”

When it comes to the right way to quit, most experts say it’s about being professional and keeping in mind what Diehl pointed out—that being rude to employers (even if they’re ex-employers) is rarely a good idea.

Emily Zorza, a division director for staffing firm OfficeTeam, said things like giving proper notice, not verbally trashing your workplace on the way out and having a job waiting for you are standard ways to play it cool when you’re leaving.

“You never know when you might work with someone again,” said Zorza, who’s based in Chicago. “People remember you for how you exited.”

At the same time, Velasquez stresses that no one should feel guilty for taking a better position and responsibly leaving their job.

“You have to do what you have to do,” he said. “Employers won’t hesitate to let you go if they have to to protect their bottom line.”

Obama ends trip on golf course

Chicago Tribune

President Obama kept his Washington routine in Chicago on Sunday, spending part of Father's Day on the links at the Beverly Country Club.

A White House spokesperson said Obama was golfing with friend Marty Nesbitt, University of Chicago physician Eric Whitaker and White House trip director Marvin Nicholson.

The president's motorcade left from Obama's Kenwood home at about 10:15 a.m. for a 20-minute drive to the Beverly Country Club, a golf course on the Far Southwest Side.

The Obamas' weekend in Chicago, their first visit as a family in two years, has been full of time with their close circle of friends. Upon arriving Friday night, the family strolled to Nesbitt's nearby home for an evening visit that lasted well into the night. They hung out at home Saturday before walking over to adviser Valerie Jarrett's house for the wedding of her daughter Laura.

Such low-key family time undoubtedly will be harder and harder to come by as the president picks up the pace of his re-election campaign. Obama currently travels for campaign and official events about two days a week, a schedule likely to increase as November nears.

As Obama golfed Sunday, first lady Michelle and their daughters headed to Oregon, where the first lady was due to deliver the commencement address at Oregon State University. Her brother, Craig Robinson, is the school's basketball coach. She's then slated to do some campaigning in Nevada and Colorado.

The president was set to head south later Sunday to Los Cabos, Mexico, the site of the G20 Summit.

A 17-year-old Chicago boy was charged with first-degree murder for the shooting of another teen last week, police said. Keon Tolliver, of the 8700 block of South Exchange Avenue, was charged with a fatal shooting that happened June 13, police said. He was charged as an adult.

Police offered a $3,000 reward this weekend for information leading to conviction of the person responsible for vandalizing the Chicago Police Memorial in the South Loop. The memorial is located near the intersection of 18th Street and McFetridge Drive.

Body found in Englewood lot

A body was found in a parking lot late Saturday morning in Englewood, police said. It was discovered in a parking lot in the 5900 block of South Eggleston Avenue, according to police. Area South detectives are investigating.

Greek elections a tough pill to swallow for voters

4 ATHENS, Greece Greek voters were in a sour mood Sunday, torn between anger at the budget cuts their leaders agreed to in return for an international bailout, and fear of the consequences of ripping up that deal.

Voters balked at what they called an impossible choice—polarized between the leftist SYRIZA party, which rejects the EU-IMF bailout that keeps Greece from bankruptcy, and conservative New Democracy, which supports it—that could decide whether they remain in the euro zone.

It is the second ballot in as many months, after elections May 6 failed to produce a government, deepening the crisis in the currency union and forcing a return to the polling booths.

“I voted with a heavy heart, for the first time for someone I don’t believe in, but I hope he will keep us in Europe,” said Orestis Barkas, 70, a retired lawyer, after voting in the leafy middle class Athens suburb of Psihiko.

“This is the last chance for our country.”

Polls show Greeks overwhelmingly want to stay in the euro zone, and New Democracy has framed the election as a straight choice between the euro and a return to the drachma. SYRIZA promises that it can renegotiate the bailout without the need to leave the single currency.

The party’s youthful leader, Alexis Tsipras, has dismissed repeated warnings from Greece’s European partners that a new government must sign up fully to the accord or see funds cut off and Greece driven into bankruptcy.

A man leaves a booth Sunday at a polling station in Athens, Greece. BLOOMBERG

Tsipras, a telegenic 37-year-old former student radical, has ridden a surge of public anger at both the crisis and the systemic corruption and cronyism blamed on New Democracy and the Socialist PASOK party, which between them had governed for decades before voters punished them both in May’s election.

CELL-ING POINTS

MAYBE THESE FUN FACTS CAN SOLVE THE SOX'S ATTENDANCE WOES

RedEye

The White Sox have occupied first place in the AL Central for a good chunk of this season, yet fans are staying away from U.S. Cellular Field. Maybe it's because they don't feel they know the park well enough given the changes it's undergone in 21 years. Or maybe they're just waiting for the Cubs to visit. Whatever the case, here are seven things to know about the stadium that will host Round 2 of this year's Crosstown Classic, beginning Monday.

SOURCES: TRIBUNE ARCHIVES, WHITESOX.COM, BALLPARKSOFBASEBALL.COM

It's gone Hollywood

The stadium doubled as a New York ballpark in the Cubs-centered flick "Rookie of the Year." It also was featured prominently in "My Best Friend's Wedding." If you listen carefully, you can hear an Ozzie Guillen at-bat announced on the public-address system in one scene.

It respects its elders

Eight Sox legends are immortalized with bronze statues in and around the stadium: Minnie Minoso, Carlton Fisk, Charles Comiskey, Luis Aparicio, Nellie Fox, Billy Pierce, Harold Baines and Frank Thomas. We bet Paul Konerko is next.

It gets the blues

Most of the park's original blue seats were swapped before the 2007 season. The only two that remain: the spots where Paul Konerko's grand slam and Scott Podsednik's game-winning homer landed in Game 2 of the 2005 World Series.

It's not old, but its dirt is

In addition to the exploding scoreboard, the infield dirt at the Cell was imported from the old Comiskey Park. Imagine all the umpires that dirt's been kicked on through the years.

It can be bought

If you're not used to calling it U.S. Cellular Field, you still have time to make it a habit. The company purchased 20 years' worth of naming rights for $68 million in 2003. But if you're President Obama, you just call it "Comiskey Field."

It found religion

Joel Osteen, pastor of the the Lakewood megachurch—the largest church in the nation—hosted a "Night of Hope" in front of thousands of followers in August. If they were praying for Adam Dunn to regain his home run stroke, it's a job well done.

It feels like old times

If you get déjà vu on the ramp across 35th Street, here's why: According to U.S. Cellular Field's Facebook page, the ramp is "designed in such a way (partly curved, partly straight but angling east-northeast) that it echoes the contour of the old first-base grandstand" at the old Comiskey Park.

1 Make a prediction for the Cubs-Sox series.	Fed up with it all, the Red Line will volunteer to shut itself down early.	Some great human being will bless your boy with ticks... right? RIGHT?	The series will fall in the woods and won't make a sound.	I predict that both teams will be embarrassed by their moron fans.	The grass will be greener at U.S. Cellular Field... literally.
2 What should the Cubs do about all the opposing fans flooding Wrigley Field?	Discount admission for anyone wearing a polo shirt over another polo shirt?	Put together a competitive team so Cubs fans WANT to show up?	Do like the Oklahoma City Thunder and dress everyone in home team T-shirts.	Shake their hands and thank them for giving the Cubs organization their hard-earned cash.	Have Theo build an ark.
3 If the Thunder win the NBA title...	... traffic in Oklahoma City will be a nightmare, with as many as eight automobiles downtown.	... then I'm going to be very happy. (And worried, as a Bulls fan.)	... the city of Miami will riot.	... TV stations in the greater Seattle area might black out NBA games for a decade or so.	... it'll be a Thunderstorm.
4 If the Heat win the NBA title...	... LeBron will be validated as the league's best player and can retire and take a break from mass communication.	... blah. Oh wait! To the girl at SAMF who puked only to have the wind...	See No. 3.	... LeBron will still be seven titles from his "not five, not six, not seven..." proclamation. Keep at it, kid.	... it'll be a [bleep]storm (rhymes with "quit").
5 What did Phil Jackson mean when he called the Knicks "clumsy"?	I'm sure the fact they have $53 million committed to three players next season had nothing to do with it.	... blow it back in her face? I hope you made it out OK. Yikes.	They tried courting him and spilled wine on him during the first date.	"I wouldn't touch that Knicks organization with a 10-foot pole."	One bad fire extinguisher ruins it for the bunch.

SPORTS FANS' TO-DO LIST FOR THIS WEEK

GETTY IMAGES

WATCH Oklahoma City at Miami

8 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday, ABC

Huge comebacks. Controversial calls. Players showing why they're superstars. What else could you want from the NBA Finals (one that doesn't include the Bulls, that is)? By the time Thursday's Game 5 is finished, one team could be celebrating a championship.

READ

'The Longest Fight'

Available Tuesday

It's common for hockey games or even tennis matches to last two hours and 48 minutes. Boxing matches? Not so much. But the 42-round bout between Joe Gans and Oscar "Battling" Nelson in September 1906 was one for the ages. Gans, the first African-American boxing champion, also fought the bigotry that underscored the time period.

ATTEND

White Sox vs. Milwaukee

Friday-Sunday, U.S. Cellular Field

It's not Bears-Packers, but the Sox can squash another set of cheeseheads when the Brewers come to town. They'll be trying to hold on to first place as well, and coming off a series against the Cubs, the Cell should be rockin'. If you need more incentive, some seats will be available for $14, in honor of Paul Konerko's push to make the All-Star team.

ATTEND

Fire vs. Columbus

7:30 p.m. Saturday, Toyota Park

Sure, the Fire have stumbled a bit lately, but there's no better way to wake up the fan base than with a grudge match against rival Columbus. You can bet Section 8 and the rest of the Fire faithful will be riled up for this one. Same goes for the team, of course, as it seeks retribution for a 2-1 loss to the Crew in May.

WATCH

College World Series

Sunday-June 26, ESPN networks

Sick of watching the Cubs or Sox fail to score runs in key situations? Maybe the football-like scores in the College World Series are more your style. Assuming, of course, you don't mind the crack of the bat being replaced with a distinctive "ping." The stakes are not muted by any stretch, however.

TRACY'S TREK

RedEye reporter Tracy Swartz continues her quest to visit every major league ballpark before she turns 30. Follow her on Twitter @tracyswartz.

L.A. Dodgers 2, White Sox 1

I was born in L.A., and this game reminded me why I'm glad to be gone: heat and crowds. The stadium, now 50 years old, is vintage Hollywood mixed with classic folly-wood. Old-time Dodgers ads played on the big screen but so did a trailer for ("shudder") "Rock of Ages." There was a line for everything, and it was difficult to walk around the stadium amid all the families. It was kind of like Disneyland but only the Dodgers fans enjoyed the ride.

Brilliant babyface

22-year-old English folk singer Laura Marling may know more about you than you do about her

By Matt Pais

REDEYE SOUND BOARD

Years ago, Laura Marling received some career advice.

"If you believe the good ones, you have to believe the bad ones," the British folk singer recalls someone telling her about reviews. "From that I deduced that it's probably best not to read any of them."

Consequently, she's ignoring near-unanimous accolades. Marling's 2008 debut, "Alas, I Cannot Swim," came out just after her 18th birthday and earned a nomination for Britain's prestigious Mercury Music Prize.

Subsequent records (2010's also Mercury-nominated "I Speak Because I Can" and 2011's "A Creature I Don't Know") only continued the stream of media and fan praise for the sophisticated talent of a singer-songwriter who is now only 22.

From her home in London, Marling (who expects to release a new, currently untitled album in early 2013) talked about constantly being called wise beyond her years, when it feels "alien" to play one of her own songs and why she's in such a hurry to finish the album she's working on right now.

You can't search for a Laura Marling interview and not find someone writing about you being wise beyond your years or having a voice that sounds like you're older than you are. How much do you take that as a compliment, or is there a point at which you wish people would stop acting so amazed you're not older?

[Laughs.] I think it reminds me that I'm cursed with a child's face. I'm always going to have the face of a child. I've got a very young-looking face. That annoys me because people always think I'm really young. They think I'm like 15 or 16. I'm constantly getting ID'd for cigarettes and alcohol. I'm sure I won't be so bemoaning of it in a few years time. But I find age to be a strange thing. I don't [mind] that people mention it all the time; I just find it weird that we're so structured by it when it's so subjective.

Maybe now's the time to dye your hair gray so people will say, "There's the wisdom we've been hearing."

[Laughs.] Yeah, maybe. Maybe that would stop it all.

You've said that you have a guitar with you at all times, and if you have a spare moment you pick it up and do some writing but don't actually write down new songs. Do you ever go back to something and almost don't recognize what you've written because it's so entrenched in that time that it came to you?

Yeah, actually that happens very often. It's nice. It feels like every song is something on that day. Everything I write is something I've dealt with so when I come back to them or I play them again live it's always kind of new.

Does it feel like recapturing the way you felt that day, or does it feel like performing a song by somebody else?

It depends. I think when I perform it best I'm back where I was when I wrote it. When I can't quite bring myself to do that then it feels slightly alien.

It seems like you see a lot of change and growth from record to record. Do you now think about this as you work and say, "I love this today, but who knows about in a year?"

[Laughs.] Now I understand when it's appropriate for me to be writing and when I will be writing and what that will mean. And then I'm able to decide—'cause I'm in the studio at the moment doing another album, and I knew that if I didn't do it now it wouldn't be right to do it any later. It wouldn't be relevant to me anymore. And that would be a shame I think. I don't like throwing away perfectly good songs. So I am conscious of it.

Ice-T's true-life rapper stories

CNN

If anyone knows hip-hop, it's Ice-T.

The rapper-turned-actor has added a title to his résumé: filmmaker. Ice recently sat down to answer questions and discuss his new documentary, "Something from Nothing: The Art of Rap."

The film explores the genre as art form and includes lots of big names in the music industry, including Kanye West, Nas, Eminem and Dr. Dre. When it came time to find voices for his project, Ice didn't have to look far.

"I did the film by calling only my friends I had in my address book," the rapper said. "All my homies I'd been in the business with over 20 years. [I told them,] 'I'm just going to ask you questions, not about the money, the cars, the jewelry, the beef, but the craft.'"

In an earlier interview, the star of "Law & Order: SVU" noted that there was an abundance of rap stars who wanted to appear in his documentary.

"There's lots of people I would love to have interviewed, but you got to remember the movie only could last two hours," he explained. "At the end of my filming, I had 52 rappers shot. I had 35 rappers waiting to be shot. My first edit was four hours, so I just couldn't fit everybody into the movie, so yeah, there's a lot of people missing, but I think I was able to get a good cross-section of the different styles of hip-hop."

His decades in the rap game allowed him insider access and candid interviews.

"I was kind of surprised at how open the guys got and just had fun in front of the camera," Ice said. "By me doing the interviews, it turned into more of a conversation than an interview, and you get to see us laugh, and you get some never-before-heard insight on some of the rapper's lives."

These days, Ice is as known for his E! reality show "Ice Loves Coco," about the exploits of him and his model wife. He said he doesn't mind people admiring his wife's ... assets.

"I don't have a problem with people admiring Coco, and I have a tight relationship," he said. "When we first got together, she was already a swimsuit model, and you can't say, 'Now we're married, you can't do that anymore.'"

So is the man once feared for his influence with songs like "Cop Killer" now a homebody who has mellowed so much that he's cool with being better known for playing a police officer on television than one of the founders of gangsta rap?

"Even when I made 'Cop Killer,' I [wasn't] a cop killer," he said. "I was just acting out a character of somebody who lost it and went after brutal cops."

Bristol Palin and her son, Tripp, on the new Lifetime series, "Life's A Tripp."

Bristol Palin ready to reveal real self

Reuters

Bristol Palin says she is just a "grounded, normal mom," and is hoping her new reality TV show will prove it.

"Life's a Tripp," which premieres at 9 p.m. Tuesday on Lifetime, is being promoted as an inside look at the life of "America's most famous teen mom" in the face of intense media scrutiny. It follows the eldest daughter of polarizing conservative politician Sarah Palin as Bristol embarks on her latest adventure—a move from her Wasilla, Alaska, hometown to an L.A. mansion owned by a family friend, and back again—along with her young son Tripp.

"People are going to see the real Bristol in this show," Palin, 21, told "Good Morning America." "I'm just a grounded, normal mom."

Palin burst onto the national scene four years ago in what she now calls "one of the most intense and embarrassing ways possible" as the accidentally pregnant, unmarried 17-year-old daughter of the 2008 Republican vice-presidential candidate.

She has since parlayed her notoriety into a lucrative career as a speaker on teen pregnancy prevention, a somewhat tongue-tied stint on "Dancing With the Stars," a 2011 memoir, a controversial blog and now her own 10-episode reality show.

"Bristol really didn't hold back. As the series progresses, she really opens up her life to us," said Matt Lutz, one of the show's producers.

"We see her relationship with her son, with her family, her boyfriend, we see her struggles as a single mom, and struggling dealing with her ex-fiance, Levi Johnston, and his role in Tripp's life. It's really a no-holds-barred look at Bristol's life," Lutz said.

Early episodes of the show see Bristol doing volunteer work for a few weeks at small L.A. charity "Help the Children," while her 17-year-old sister, Willow, takes care of 3-year-old Tripp—until Willow gets fed up and packs her bags for Wasilla.

Bristol also rides a mechanical bull during a night out with friends in a Hollywood bar, and runs into a heckler who calls her mother evil and a whore. The heckler recently filed a lawsuit accusing Palin of defamation for citing the 2011 incident in her decision to leave L.A. and accusing Lifetime of filming him without permission.

Clearly ill at ease in the Hollywood spotlight, Palin moved back to Alaska after about three months of filming, and the show returns with her to follow her life back home.

The five Palin children and mom Sarah, who were seen in last year's reality series "Sarah Palin's Alaska," also are featured, producers say.

ROMANCE PLANET

BY JENNIFER SHEPHERD | READ MORE AT LIPSTICKMYSTIC.COM

Gemini May 21-June 21

There's a new moon in your sign, so make a wish and it just might come true. If you've been trying to meet someone wonderful, you'll finally get lucky. If you're in a relationship and things have only been so-so, they'll turn fabulous.

Cancer June 22-July 22

The summer solstice is making you super emotional. You'll stalk your former boyfriend and try to convince him to hook up with you again. Just. Don't. Do. It.

Leo July 23-Aug. 22

A relationship is great one minute and a horror show the next. You can thank Venus for that. This probably isn't the best week to propose to someone, elope to Vegas or break up with anybody. Wait until the emotional clouds clear.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22

You're pissed off about your career. The moon is decreasing your cash flow and you're feeling the pain. You might not be able to ply your girlfriend with oysters and champagne.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23

The sun is filling your head with wild and crazy ideas. You're thinking about hooking up with a stranger just for the novelty factor. Go for it.

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 21

Mercury is making you extremely psychic. You could have a moment of sexual telepathy. You'll sense that your coworker is hot for you. Hopefully, you're right.

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21

With the moon opposite your sign, you're cranky. Whatever your partner does for you will piss you off. Try to at least appear grateful, even if you're not really feeling it.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19

The sun is moving opposite your sign for a few weeks, which means you should chill out. Don't make any big moves. Don't stir things up with your honey, even though you're dying to make trouble.

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18

Usually you're pretty easy-going, but this week you could go off on someone. The moon is making it clear that certain people have been taking advantage of you. If your honey is used to you paying all the bills, stage a protest.

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20

You could receive an unexpected compliment from someone, courtesy of a friendly moon. Or you might find out that somebody has a crush on you. You'll probably think it's too good to be true. What if it isn't?

Aries March 21-April 19

Your sex drive is higher than ever thanks to a frisky moon. If you're single, you'll go crazy with unexpressed lust. If you're with someone, you'll want to spend every waking minute in the bedroom with your honey.

Taurus April 20-May 20

Jupiter is forcing you to choose between your career and your relationship. Maybe you're being pressured to work more hours at your job. A girl's gotta do what she's gotta do.

Keep iPhone safe, juiced

Third Rail Slim Case for iPhone 4/4S
$89.99 (a spare battery costs an additional $59.99) at thirdrailmobility.com, AT&T, Amazon, BestBuy, Target, etc.

What it is: A slender protective case and removable backup battery that won't turn your iPhone into a chunky monkey. The 1250 mAh lithium ion battery is ultrathin and weighs only 1.4 ounces. When your iPhone 4/4S is low on power, you slide the ultrathin smart battery onto the back of the case, and your phone starts charging. Even with the battery on the back of the Third Rail case, the phone still is sleek.

After charging, you can use the on/off switch to stop charging or slip the battery off the case and drop it in a purse or pocket until needed again. The battery has five indicator lights to show how much power remains, in 20 percent increments. The battery has an out port to use when charging other devices.

The good: When you use Wi-Fi, Bluetooth and run several apps simultaneously, your iPhone becomes a power hog. We did just that and tested the case and battery along with a spare, and some days needed the extra battery. We recommend carrying a spare if your phone usually needs more juice not long after lunch. One of the coolest features is that the batteries stack. You can stack both batteries on the case and charge your phone and additional batteries in a few hours using a single micro-USB cable.

The bad: The iPhone battery is about 1440 mAh, so at 1250 mAh, the slim, lightweight Third Rail battery doesn't fully recharge a phone but would get most users through a day.

RESEARCH VOLUNTEERS NEEDED
HEALTHY MEN AND WOMEN 18-55 YEARS OLD
FALL ALLERGY SYMPTOMS

DO YOU HAVE HAY FEVER IN THE FALL?

Researchers at the University of Chicago are conducting a research study to see whether an experimental nasal spray (not approved by the FDA) is safe and can reduce the signs and symptoms of allergic rhinitis (hay fever).

If you have a history of allergy symptoms only in the fall, but do not currently have any symptoms, and are skin test positive to ragweed you may be eligible to participate in this study. A screening visit, lasting about 2 hours, will take place at the Nasal Physiology Laboratory at the University of Chicago and then two additional study visits will be conducted.

If you are interested, please call 773-702-5889 for more information.
You will receive compensation for your time required to complete the study visits.

CONANZA REWIND

ABOUT LAST NIGHT

Luis Gomez

lgomez@tribune.com
@aboutluisgomez

What did O'Brien do during his latest visit to Chicago? Funny you ask ...

Conan O'Brien was easy to spot around Chicago last week—and not just because he's 6-foot-4 and has hard-to-miss red hair.

The L.A.-based talk show host was out and about while here filming "Conan" at the Chicago Theatre, part of the TBS Just For Laughs comedy festival.

O'Brien had dinner with about 20 of his staff members June 7 at GT Fish & Oyster in River North. He ordered the clam chowder and kept an eye on the Boston Celtics, his hometown team, as they faced the Miami Heat in the NBA Eastern Conference finals.

O'Brien visited River North men's shop Haberdash on June 8. He dined at Lou Malnati's Pizzeria in the Gold Coast on June 10 and Spiaggia on Tuesday. O'Brien's week of filming in Chicago came to an end Thursday with a wrap party at N9NE Steakhouse, but he stuck around Friday to attend the Cubs-Boston Red Sox game at Wrigley Field with his family.

"Conan" sidekick and former Yorkville, Ill., resident Andy Richter, who threw out the first pitch before Thursday's Cubs-Detroit Tigers game at Wrigley, had lunch Wednesday at South Branch in the Loop.

Aziz Ansari took part in the "Conan" tapings Wednesday—he serenaded an audience member—and was spotted at Cuvée the next night. The comedian and "Parks and Recreation" actor had dinner at Nellcote on Friday after his two Chicago Theatre shows.

"30 Rock" actor Jack McBrayer, who appeared on "Conan" on June 11, dined at the reopened Cru Cafe & Wine Bar in the Gold Coast that same day. McBrayer was spotted at River-view Tavern in Roscoe Village on June 9.

"Curb Your Enthusiasm" actor Jeff Garlin also appeared Yelling at people for a living. How do you sleep in your car at night?"

—Triumph the Insult Comic Dog, to the staff of Wiener's Circle, during a bit that aired on Thursday's taping of "Conan" at the Chicago Theatre on "Conan" on June 11 and later that evening stopped by my go-to Wrigleyville bar, Merkles, and did an impromptu set at its open mic comedy night.

ALSO SPOTTED ...

» "30 Rock" actress Elizabeth Banks had dinner Tuesday at Cafe Spiaggia.

» Kid Rock stopped by The Underground on Thursday.

» Former Rage Against the Machine guitarist Tom Morello dined Thursday at Mastro's Steakhouse.

» Betty White attended the grand opening of the Museum of Broadcast Communications and had lunch at Joe's Stone Crab on Wednesday.

» Kelsey Grammer and wife Kayte celebrated their baby shower at Drumbar in the Raffaello Hotel on Tuesday with Kelsey's "Boss" co-stars Kathleen Robertson, Sanaa Lathan and Jonathan Groff.

That's how many weekends "Madagascar 3: Europe's Most Wanted" has been the No. 1 movie. The animated flick made $33.5 million last weekend, Reuters reports, easily beating "Prometheus." In their opening weekend, "Rock of Ages" earned $15.1 million and "That's My Boy" earned $13 million.

Oh, Justin Bieber. What will you think of next? The Bieb rented a helicopter for girlfriend Selena Gomez when the two were in Toronto before Sunday's MuchMusic Video Awards, people.com reports. The couple took a jaunt over Niagara Falls and into Stratford, Ontario, according to the mag. No word on whether the Bieb's hair got messed up by the chopper blades.

So bad it's good

"Breaking Bad" will end its run on AMC after 16 more episodes, but the story might not be done, star Bryan Cranston said. "[Show creator] Vince [Gilligan] feels that now we have too much story." So ... a movie? "I wouldn't mind visiting that possibility," Cranston told the Los Angeles Times.

Sad turtles

The heroes in a half-shell are in the unemployment line—at least for a little while. Paramount Pictures has shut down production of a "Ninja Turtles" reboot, thr.com reports, citing anonymous sources. The trade mag reports a release date for the flick has been pushed from December 2013 to May 2014. So not cowabunga, dudes.

“The fact Kalon will ever be on any TV [show] again makes me want to stab my eyeballs out with dull pencils.”

—“Bachelorette” Emily Maynard’s tweet on learning that ex-suitor Kalon McMahon will appear on “Bachelor Pad”

Workaholic

She's OK, folks! Lindsay Lohan tweeted Saturday that she was exhausted from working on "Liz & Dick," and that's why paramedics were called to her home the day before. Can't this woman go a single day without a legal or medical crisis? Wait, we already know the answer to that.
